11TH ANNUAL
William I. Riker Symposium
Virtual or In-Person

Program Overview
Upon completion of the symposium, attendees will be able to integrate the patient experience of resilience with multidisciplinary clinical strategies—including early detection, genetic risk assessment, and preventive care—to combat the rising incidence of early-onset and male-specific cancers.

Target Audience
Physician, Nurse, Physician Assistant, Nurse Practitioner, Advanced Nurse Practitioner, Doctor of Nursing Practice, Social Worker, Physician therapist, Occupational Therapist, Fellows, Residents, and medical students

Learning Objectives
- Understand Patient Impact: Recognize the psychological and physical effects of early-onset cancer and strategies to improve survivorship.
- Improve Detection: Analyze atypical presentations of colorectal cancer in young men to reduce misdiagnosis and age bias.
- Assess Genetic Risk: Identify hereditary syndromes to properly route patients to Riverview's High Risk Clinic.
- Create Holistic Care Plans: Integrate patient lived experiences with clinical expertise to improve screening and support.
